Virtues of Spreading Knowledge via Modern Means of Communication

Shaykh Sulaymān Ar-Ruhaylī (Allāh preserve him)

Amongst the blessings Allāh has bestowed upon us in this time are these (technological) devices which are at our disposal as well as these means (of communication), both of which we can utilise to attain knowledge and also spread it amongst people.

From great Jihād and from the means of attaining tremendous reward is that the youth from the youth of this Ummah dedicate themselves and devote their attention to these devices in order to refine knowledge, to communicate it to others and to cooperate with one another in doing so. This is indeed from the greatest forms of Jihād and it is an act resulting in tremendous reward.

So I encourage all those who have the ability from our youth to show great concern for this matter in order to propagate knowledge which is built upon the Book of Allāh and the Sunnah of His Messenger (ﷺ) to the rest of the Ummah.

Subhanallāh! You may spread a clip of one of the scholars and all the people across the world see this clip. And the number of viewers may reach a million or more. Subhanallāh! Allāh will reward you for all the people to whom you have communicated this knowledge.

How tremendous this reward is! And what a great and magnificent noble station this is!

O Muslim youth! Fear Allāh! Fear Allāh!

Fear Allāh! Fear Allāh in regards to seeking knowledge.

Do not be lazy and negligent concerning this matter and do not become weary and bored. Rather, strive hard, remain patient, endure, and persevere so that you may be successful.

Strive hard to communicate knowledge to people in a good and pleasant way which will benefit them in their religion and in their worldly affairs.
